the students' experience

All allotments have a community essence.

Small details which board the area:

- distinctive design?
- Crows?
- (things to do)
- The function of the space?

Becomes immersive because you are in a completely different environment and you almost feel as though you are more in touch with nature.

- pick and choosing of books

Walking through - Harvesting ideas: to visit you on an allotment.

- connecting with others interactive through speech.

I want it to be a real interactive space, memorable...
- people can feel interact with nature
- However, don't want it to be too close
- Layout is important
- How it is seen by the audience
- Because of the design, the colour should be kept neutral so that it doesn't bring a way the attention of purpose - place of
- intimate

students' feedback: stimulating, competitive, challenging

As the target audience is going to be teenage student
 - the whole point of this idea is to raise the awareness and encourage student to come up with 'sustainable ideas' in their work, using broken part of furniture to create 'new unique piece of furniture'; the style is going to be elegant and modern of the same, this is to attract student to use the library, and also that them know even upcycle can be practical and functional as well as fashionable.
